

HOW TO SAVE THE ELMS

A MATTER WHICH IS EXCITING WIDE SPREAD INTEREST.

The Elm Leaf Beetle—The Remedy is Spraying—What Director Atwater of the Storrs Experiment Station Says on the Subject—Kerosene Emulsion and How to Use It—What a New York State Authority Says—Take Care of our Beautiful Elms, the Pride of New Haven.

In many parts of the country where the elm tree is apt to flourish, if the worms permit it, it is made that the elms are being attacked along the line by an enemy which is working sad havoc among them. The universal prevalence of elm tree pests this season has been noticed by hundreds of our readers. The leaf eaters are thriving to an alarming extent. There is need of prompt and efficient action in the case. All lovers of nature and of our own beautiful elms are directly interested. The great New York dailies are taking up the subject and the authorities all around agree that spraying the elms is the best remedy. On the subject the following will be of interest to all.

To the Journal and Courier:

Middletown, Conn., July 13, 1895.
Dear Sir:—The enclosed calls attention to a means, and indeed the only means now feasible for providing against the ravages of the elm leaf beetle next season. I trust the importance to the public and the interest to your readers will secure for it an introduction in your columns. Very truly yours,

W. O. ATWATER, Director.
THE PRESENT REMEDY AND FUTURE SAFEGUARD.

The following in reference to the elm leaf beetle, and kerosene emulsion; how to use it.

Very many of the elm trees in this state, especially in places west of the Connecticut river, on which spraying has been neglected have been partially or completely destroyed by this insect. At the present time the larvae which have caused this damage have mostly descended to the ground and are clustered about the base of the trees in large numbers. The easiest way to destroy them and prevent to a considerable extent their ravages another season, is to treat the ground around the base of the trees for a distance of several yards, with strong kerosene emulsion. This will not help the trees this season, but if all the pupae at the surface of the ground are destroyed, and if this is done under all the trees in a given town, there will be no beetles to lay eggs next season. Unless the pupae are destroyed now the only way to protect the elms next year will be by the expensive and somewhat difficult method of spraying with Paris green or London purple. The Storrs agricultural experiment station issued a bulletin the first of May describing this beetle and giving the only method of protecting elm trees. The station still has a few copies of this bulletin which will be furnished upon application to the station at Storrs, Conn.

The following is the receipt for the preparation of kerosene emulsion: Soft soap, 1 quart; kerosene, 1 quart; water, 6 quarts. Warm the soap until it becomes liquid. Remove from near fire, add kerosene, and agitate rapidly with a force pump for five to ten minutes until it becomes a homogeneous creamy mass from which the kerosene will not separate on standing. Add the water and thoroughly mix, when the emulsion will have the appearance of milk. This should be applied near the trees at two or three different times in sufficient quantity to thoroughly saturate the surface of the ground. A force pump with spraying nozzle or a watering pot with hose can be used to apply the emulsion. A hard soap emulsion can be made by dissolving two ounces of hard soap in boiling water and using it instead of the soft soap.

WHAT IS SAID IN NEW YORK.

The following appeared in yesterday's New York Times:

The publication recently in the New York Times of the fact that the trees in the Brooklyn parks and streets are neglected aroused much interest, and it is likely that efforts will soon be made to remedy the evils and neglect. Lewis Collins, the secretary of the Tree Planting and Fountain society of Brooklyn, has received a number of letters on the subject. The following came to him from William W. Buckley, a lawyer with offices at 171 Broadway this city:

New York, July 8, 1895.

Mr. Lewis Collins:

Dear Sir—I have read with a great deal of interest your article in to-day's Times on "The Pest of the Elm Tree." I have three or four beautiful trees on my place at Cranford, N. J., fifty or sixty feet high. To cut them down will detract much from the beauty of my land, and I wish to save them if possible. Can you inform me if it is practicable to spray these trees, and if so, how it should be done, and what insecticides should be used?

I was not aware that this pest was a beetle, not having seen the full-grown insect. My trees, trunks and leaves, swarm with worms or maggots. I presume they are young beetles. I thought that by binding cotton about the trunks of the trees, a few feet below the branches, I might prevent these worms from crawling up and eating the leaves. If the pest is a beetle, however, and can fly, I presume I would accomplish nothing by such an attempt. I have been trying for quite some time to get information to help me get rid of the pest, without success, and I trust you will pardon me from trespassing upon your time in this manner. If you can aid me with any suggestions, I shall be greatly obliged to you.

Very truly yours,

W. W. BUCKLEY.

To this letter Mr. Buckley received the following reply from Secretary Collins:

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 9, 1895.

Mr. W. W. Buckley, 171 Broadway, New York City:

Dear Sir—Your letter of the 8th inst., asking about the elm tree pest, imported elm-leaf beetle, Galerina xanthomela, is received. I take pleasure in saying that this insect, as well as all other leaf-eating insects, are entirely under control by the intelligent use of insecticides. The subject of insecticides and the methods of employing them have received careful study by our best men. I may mention Riley, Howard, and Galloway of Washington, D. C., Linner of Albany,

N. Y., Smith of the New Jersey Agricultural College Experiment station, Bailey and Loderman of the Cornell University Experiment station. There are many other excellent men in other parts of this country. I may say the world, who have devoted many years to the study of insects and the best methods of destroying them.

Their studies have been successful, and now it remains with the people to make use of this knowledge which is offered by discoverers without price. Spraying trees to destroy leaf-eating insects is not a new discovery. It is not at all surprising that men involved in business and burdened by its cares should give no attention to such things. But what shall I say of that class of people who have charge of our parks and gardens, whose business it is to keep abreast with the times, and who are expected to know and to apply such knowledge? You are a counselor at law. Should one retain your services in an important action and the case be lost on account of your ignorance of the law pertaining to it, you would be blame-worthy and you would justly suffer loss of reputation. Our park keepers and gardeners and florists, and indeed, all who assume the care of trees and plants should be held responsible for their ignorance of the best means and methods. And the time is fast coming when ignorance of well-established principles for preserving foliage from leaf eaters will be culpable, and guilty ones will be held to account.

The manufacturers of excellent apparatus for spraying, from the tiny plant the little child can carry in its hand to the giant elm, are legion, and their implements and contrivances have reached a degree of perfection truly admirable. You ask, then, what to do; nothing except to reach forth and accept what the wise and ingenious have made ready at hand. I sincerely hope those companies which have sent me their illustrated catalogues of outfits and various contrivances, and which contain so much of interest in recipes for insecticides, with direction in detail, will advertise their wares in the newspapers, that the people may know what is prepared for them. I will send definite answer under separate cover. If at any time this society can be of any service to you it will take pleasure in receiving your request. If it is within its power to aid you, such aid will be cheerfully given. Very respectfully,

LEWIS COLLINS, Secretary.

It is likely that the Tree Planting and Fountain society of Brooklyn will take up the matter of the neglect of the Brooklyn trees by the authorities.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM

Mr. Perry will address the children. There will be opportunity to purchase excursion tickets as follows:

"An Outrage on the Community."

To the Editor of the JOURNAL AND COURIER.

The suggestion of having the "Yale-Cambridge" games in New Haven early in the fall is noticed by the citizens here whose indignation at the conduct of those celebrating the "Yale-Harvard boat race" increases daily instead of lessening.

That New Haven should dread a victory to Yale because the city is then placed under mob law agrees with the suggestion that there are not enough police to stop the noise and that the military should be ordered out as in other riots—"riot" being a state of affairs where the citizens no longer can have their rights protected by the police.

That wagons with intoxicated men can drive around our streets all night and even until daylight throwing out "cannon-crackers" that awake people for the distance of whole blocks was pronounced an outrage on the community.

Little children, the sick, our aged people who need rest, all and everyone, are these to say: "We cannot help ourselves. We must submit."

Of what use are our city laws if not enforced?

Is Yale college governed by one set of laws, and the inhabitants of the town by other rules?

At such a time as the evening (not night) of a "victory" would be met by the pleasant sympathy of the persons who now all agree to the fact that such outrages as the last are beyond endurance.

A Golden Wedding Celebration—East Rock Lodge—The Friends—Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Dutcher observed the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage with relatives and a few friends at their home, 134 Grand avenue, on Friday. In the evening a company of friends from the Grand avenue Congregational church, of which Mr. Dutcher has been sexton fourteen years, made a surprise visit and brought with them a handsome oak sideboard as an evidence of their esteem. The children presented a fine China tea set, and there were other handsome gifts. The children of the couple present were Mr. and Mrs. George H. Dutcher, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Reeves, and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bullock of this city and ex-postmaster Henry Dryhurst and wife of Meriden. There was only one absentee, Charles B. Dutcher of Southern California. The couple were married in Sag Harbor, L. I., July 13, 1845, by the Rev. David R. Rowland of the Bethel Baptist church.
